ROLE OF THE VIRGINIA OFFICE ON AGING

In an effort to better serve the elderly of Virginia, the 1974 General Assembly created an independent Office on Aging. The mission of the Office is the development and coordination of comprehensive programs for Virginia's elderly which include a full range of advocacy, health, education and social services to improve the quality of their lives.

The Director of the Office, who is appointed by the Governor, heads a staff of 20 which is organized into three sections.

The Planning Section coordinates state-level program development with other agencies to assure elderly participation in existing or proposed programs. The Planning Section is also charged with developing strategies for new programs which will benefit the elderly. An important part of its work for the coming year will be the development of a comprehensive needs analysis to provide hard data on problems of the elderly for use in guiding future program development. The Planning Section also provides information on aging services, needs, and resources to elected officials, other agencies, and the general public.

The Operations Section of the Office on Aging concentrates its efforts on local level, helping to establish and develop Area Agencies on Aging (AAA's) and service programs, such as nutrition, operated under the auspices of AAA's. Through this network of local agencies, better planning, coordination, & administration of aging programs in each community can be accomplished. In this way, communities are better able to tap additional resources for the elderly, deliver direct services to elderly clients, and plan programs which are needed by the elderly in their areas. The Operations Section provides technical assistance and training to local personnel in all phases of their work.

The third section is the Accounting and Financial Management Section of the office which has responsibility for the management and disbursal of all funds, awarded to and by the Office. These funds are on Page 8 of this document. After distribution of these funds, the Accounting Section handles the financial aspects of grants management training and budgeting. With this training local agencies are better able to meet accounting and financial regulations imposed by federal and state

It is no. he function of the Office on Aging to directly provide every needed service to Virginia's elderly. However, as part of our advocacy work, we attempt to make all agencies aware of their responsibility to include the elderly in their client group. Although in some cases the elderly require special services, many times they only wish to be included in programs for the general public.

The mandate of our office, as prescribed in Code of Virginia, Chapter 24, SS.2.1-372 and SS.2.1-373 is summarized as follows:

1. To study the economic, physical, social, health, educational, and housing facilities available to persons 60 years of age and over within Virginia to determine their needs and problems;

2. To determine services and programs now available to elderly Virginians and make specific recommendations which will improve delivery of such services;

3. To act as the single State agency with responsibility for the Older Americans Act and any supplemental legislation. In line with this authority the Office on Aging will coordinate efforts among all State agencies to develop work plans for services provided to the elderly.

4. To apply for additional grants or other funds which relate to the improvement of services to elderly Virginians.

5. To coordinate efforts in localities to establish local or area agencies on aging in accordance with rules and regulations developed by the Office.

Concord Garden Club Held Christmas Workshop

On November 19 the Concord Garden Club held its annual Christmas workshop at New Concord Presbyterian Church.

A facinating program on candlemaking was given by Mrs. Charles Graf and Mrs. Harvey Henderson. Mrs. Graf gave a brief history of candlemaking and use from Biblical times until the present, then she and Mrs. Henderson demonstrated how to make rolled and dipped candles.

After a covered dish luncheon, the members enjoyed making their own candles.

The next meeting of the club will be on December 22 at 8 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Douglas Crowther, which is the annual Christmas Party.
